Study Released by National Commission on COVID-19 and Criminal Justice Finds Coronavirus Infection, Death Rates in Prison Vary Widely Among States

Separate report finds that local jail populations decreased an average of 31% early in the pandemic before rising again in May

5:00 a.m. ET, September 2, 2020
Contact: Jenifer Warren
jwarren@counciloncj.org
916-217-0780

With more than 175 members from across the criminal justice field, the Council on Criminal Justice serves as an expert resource for journalists covering everything from policing and crime trends to corrections, the courts, reentry, urban violence, and substance abuse, as well as the politics of reform and broader context of social and racial justice.

Members include four former governors; current and former police chiefs and sheriffs; prosecutors and public defenders; leading advocates and researchers; justices on state supreme courts; state, local and federal policy makers; leaders in business, faith, and philanthropy; formerly incarcerated people; victims of crime; community program providers, and others.

A list of CCJ's inaugural members can be found here – and you can stay up to date on criminal justice news by following our member list on Twitter. For help locating members who can provide expert commentary on the issues you're covering , contact Jenifer Warren at jwarren@councilonCJ.org. We can help you find credible voices to speak both to the nature and extent of the problems in the criminal justice system, as well as research-based and promising solutions.

CCJ is a nonpartisan membership organization and think tank created to advance understanding of the criminal justice policy challenges facing the nation and build consensus for solutions based on facts, evidence, and fundamental principles of justice. To learn more, visit councilonCJ.org.